"Firedancer" was commission by my daughter. She is an avid reader and was very off-put that I was writing a book that was a little too mature for her 11 years of age. I decided to write a more "Young Adult" oriented fantasy set in the same universe I had already created for the other, more adult, book entitled, "Lilith."

For some reason I immediately fell in love with the story and the characters. What I had planned on being an off-and-on project over the next year became an obsession over four months. And when I started to allow people to read the book they, too, became obsessed.

I hope that you find this book to be as joyous to read as I did writing it.
